Part II, Section B, Line 17A, Facts and Circumstances Test:

Although the Fund for Investigative Journalism, Inc. does not have 33 1/3% public support, it does receive a substantial amount of its support from contributions made directly or indirectly from a combination of sources, including the general public.

As required in Section 1.170A-9T Section (F) subsection 3(l), the Fund for Investigative Journalism does receive more than 10% of its support from public sources.

As outlined in Section 1.17A-9T Section (F) subsection 3 (II), The Fund for Investigative Journalism is undertaking a major campaign for additional financial support. In addition to fund-raising with foundations that support journalism, the fund has organized a campaign to approach previous winners as well as prominent individuals and journalists to increase the level of public support of our work. The Fund is also developing a fundraising campaign using online social network sites. As outlined in Section 1.170A-9T Section (F) Subsection (III) the level of public support for the fund has varied over the years, and in 2009 and 2010, the level was 16.10% and 18.04%, respectively.

Most of our contributions are from a limited number of unrelated private foundations. As outlined above, we are working hard to broaden our base of public support, and in 2010 the increase in our public support is a result of our efforts to expand our public sources of revenue.

The Fund for Investigative Journalism was founded in 1969. It has an 11-member board that consists of active and retired investigative reporters, including a number of Pulitzer Prize winners, and professors and faculty members at major universities around the country with well established journalism and investigative reporting programs. The academic institutions represented currently on the board include the University of Maryland, the University of Illinois and the American University.

The Fund exists to provide a critical service to the public by selecting and financing well qualified journalists to produce significant, independent and often ground-breaking investigative stories in the United States and around the world. The journalists who receive grants from the Fund have presented and distributed their work in newspapers, magazines, on broadcast programs -- both television and radio, and on web sites in text, audio and video. These stories keep government and business accountable to the public, protect the weak and powerless, shine light on injustices and the need for reform, and reveal secret illegal activities that pollute the environment, plunder the public coffers, or that result in the killing or physical abuse of citizens.

The work supported by the Fund has been recognized with numerous awards and spurred follow-up investigations and reform that continue to benefit the public.

The watchdog role of journalists that the Fund has supported for more than 40 years is crucial to creating and preserving free and democratic societies. Because of the Fund, the public has received a greater awareness and understanding of the major issues and problems in the U.S. and around the world.

The Fund is now more important than ever because of the major reductions in staff and resources occurring in the news media in the U.S.

and because of the shocking lack of resources for foreign journalists in developing countries. Without the Fund, many of the most necessary and valuable investigative stores would not be done.
